Build and Live in Torrance A Typical American Cottage That Is Different

Livable homes rather than architectural types count most, generally speaking, with the average builders of the smaller sized houses, and this classification fits this particular cottage with the snugness of a new glove. While its lines are good and it appeals to the eye it would be difficult to name it anything but a typical American cottage. And it is that.

The architect has added to its interest distinct features of a least three recognized architectural types, but has done it so deftly that only the trained eye would detect them. And no one of them is to the detriment of the appearance of this charming little home which in any surroundings will always win its just measure of praise and be worthy of your pride.

Architect's Home of Unique Design. Standing far back on a spacious lot, this beautiful stucco bungalow at Glendale, Cal., attracts the attention of all passersby. It was designed and built by George W. Mosher as his own home. The architect gateways in perfect balance at either side of the house and garden wall are plastered with tinted portland cement stucco to harmonize with the house, surfaced with the same material. The house itself is a true American bungalow. There is little to suggest Old World design in its architectural lines.

Telling Fortunes may be all right, but we'd sooner have ours told by a man who has made one than by some other person who tells them. A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush but who wants birds anyhow. You'll not make a fortune but you'll save real money if you let us do your plumbing and heating work. We guarantee our work and assure you of unexcelled service.
